BADASS OF THE WEEK

You must do things you think you cannot do
- Eleanor Roosevelt

Henry Johnson
US Army WWI

On May 14, 1918, Johnson and Needham Roberts were serving sentry duty in the Argonne Forest. Just after 2 a.m. the duo was attacked by a detachment of some 20 German troops. Both men had soon been wounded—Roberts so severely that he was unable to stand or shoot—but Johnson fought back with hand grenades and his rifle. Despite being shot several times, he returned fire until his weapon jammed, and then used it as a club and fought until it broke into pieces. When the Germans were trying to take Roberts prisoner, Johnson used his bolo knife and slashed and stabbed several men until they fell back. When the dust cleared, Johnson had inflicted at least a dozen casualties on the Germans and suffered 21 wounds from gunfire and bayonets.
